Free Worldwide Ground Support for One Year from Universal Aviation

Geneva (May 19, 2008) – Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup>, the award-winning worldwide ground support division of Universal Weather and Aviation, Inc., is giving away a unique promotion of one year of free ground support at any of its worldwide locations at EBACE2008, May 20-22 in Geneva. EBACE attendees must visit Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup> Exhibit # 347 to determine if they qualify to enter. The drawing winner will be announced Thursday, May 22 at 11 a.m. Aircraft with a take-off weight up to 45,000 kg are eligible for as many as 60 visits with free ground support services to Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup> locations.

“We’re proud of our ground support service, which operators recently rated as the best handling service in the world in one well-known business aviation trade publication,” said Adolfo Aragon, Vice President, Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup>. “This promotion is an opportunity to introduce operators to our facilities and services, who may not have been previously exposed to the high level of service of Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup> locations throughout Europe and the rest of the world.”

Since its founding in 2001, Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup> has expanded to regions including Europe, the Middle East, Asia, and Latin America by providing consistent ground support services through independent ground handling providers with English-speaking personnel and comprehensive local knowledge.

Today, there are Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup> locations throughout the globe and the division is well known for adherence to standards for consistent, professional, and personalized services.

For full terms and conditions of the contest, visit Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup> Exhibit # 347. For more information on Universal Aviation<sup>sm</sup> worldwide ground support locations, visit www.universalaviation.aero.
